Notes

Both present participles and gerunds end in -ing. But they do not serve the same purposes in a sentence. For example, a gerund is a noun derived from a verb. It can serve the following purposes in a sentence:
As subject of a verb
Smoking is injurious to health.
Trespassing is prohibited.

As object of a transitive verb
I like reading.
She likes singing.

As object of a preposition
I am tired of waiting.
We were stopped from entering the compound.

As complement of a verb
What I most detest is smoking.

A participle is a word which is partly a verb and partly an adjective. Participles are usually used to qualify nouns.

A rolling stone gathers no moss.
